EFFECT UPON EUROPE OF THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA.

The voyage of Columbus in 1492 was in many respects the greatest event which had occurred in the world since the birth of Christ. Politically and socially it was the beginning of an entirely new chapter in human history, and it wrought effects upon men's speculative thinking which, though perhaps less conspicuous, were not less real or remarkable. In much more than the mere geographical sense was this the discovery of a new world. It was the first in a complicated series of events which four centuries have not yet fully rounded into a period; the foundation of a new Europe in America, in Africa, in Australia and in the islands of the Pacific; the rise of the English race to political and commercial supremacy, and the advance of the English language toward what may become universal dominion; the reorganization of government upon a higher plane than the middle ages had even been able to foreshadow; the renovation of society in the old Europe through countless subtle influences; the permanent triumph of the industrial over the predatory spirit; the successful assertion of individual freedom against the paralyzing absolutism inherited from the Roman empire; the overthrow of sacerdotalism, and the Christianization of the world. It would probably be too much to assert that some of these desirable results might not have been attained, so far as the old Europe is concerned, even if the lands beyond the sea had never been explored and colonized. It is unquestionable, however, that the progress would have been much slower and much more subject to interruption. The part performed by England, for example, in the work of European civilization since the age of Elizabeth has been so immense and so complicated that no elaborateness of analytic description can do it justice. Yet England in Elizabeth's time was hardly a first-class power, and but for the colonization of America in the seventeenth century it is difficult to see in what way she would so surely or so soon have gained the commercial supremacy which gave her in the eighteenth the dominion of the ocean, and thus secured her the foremost position in the world. To those—and there are many such in America—who are in the habit of regarding American history as a dry and uninteresting study, it may be a profitable matter of reflection that since the beginning of the seventeenth century it is impossible to follow intelligently the affairs of the old Europe through a single generation without constant references to the New World.—John Fiske, in Harper's Magazine.

THE PINE FORESTS OF CALIFORNIA.

The mountains of California are heavily clothed with pines; two of the most valuable being the sugar pine and the heavy-wooded pine. A writer on the vastness of the supply of timber in the State says: There is probably more timber, and of a quality not surpassed in the State, in Fresno county than in any other in California. The timber belt extends along the Sierras a distance of fully 200 miles and varies from ten to forty miles in width. When the timber in the more accessible sections is exhausted, this valuable belt will be attacked, and its almost inexhaustible supply will give employment to thousands of persons, and will require millions of capital to handle it. The first incentive will be the California Central railway. This will tap the same belt now being worked by the Madera Flume and Trading Company, but in time other roads will be built to tap the pineries on the south side of the San Joaquin and of King's rivers. There are millions of dollars in the piney forests of Fresno county.

THERE is a dentist up-town who advertises that he can make a set of teeth for a person in ten minutes. Double sets are set on hinges, and if they do not happen to fit the owner, all he has to do is to grab them and chew his food in his hands, which is not only a novel invention, but one that is very saving on the jaw.—Puck.

HE was an entire stranger to the girls present, and the boys were mean and would not introduce him. He finally plucked up courage, and, stepping up to a young lady, requested the pleasure of her company for the next dance. She looked at him in surprise, and informed him she had not the pleasure of his acquaintance. "Well," remarked Casanovia, "you don't take any more chances than I do."

IN the German empire there are 59 278 flour-mills, employing 126,553 hands. There are 70,232 bakeries, employing 129,034 hands. The proportion of mill to the population is larger than in any other country. A great number of them are grist mills, however, and do only a small local trade.

THE man who has no enemies should look about him to see if he has any real friends.

GARFIELD'S DISGUST FOR "CONFLICTS OF MEN."

I do not think it is generally known that Garfield rejected overtures in 1872 to be elected to the Senate by the votes of the Democrats, combined with those of a number of Republicans from his section of Ohio, who were dissatisfied with the caucus nomination of their party. The reason he gave for his course was that the position would not be an independent one, and that he would be placed under obligations to the Democrats, although they asked no pledges. Three times he declined to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of Ohio, when he had only to consent to let his name go before the convention to have had the honor conceded to him without a contest. In preferring the House of Representatives to the executive chair at Columbus, he was wise. His place was in the field of ideas, arguments and constructive work, and he would have been restive at any post of duty which limited the activity of his intellect, and held him down to the enforcement of statutes made by other men. Indeed, the Presidency was foreign to his tastes, except that it gave him opportunities to impress his ideas upon Congress and the country. A few weeks before he was shot, I heard from his own lips an expression of the distaste he felt for the business of deciding between the claims of individuals for office. "I have all my life delighted in conflicts of ideas," he said, "but I never cared for conflicts of persons. Now I am obliged to spend nearly my whole time in hearing arguments and appeals in behalf of individuals." He went on to say that, if he failed of success in his new position, he thought it would be because of his want of liking and training for this important part of the executive duties. He found it almost impossible to give his mind to the question whether A, B or C was the best man to be Postmaster at Peoria, or whether D should be turned out of a Collectorship to make place for E.—E. V. Smalley.

WHISKY DRINKING IN A DRY CLIMATE.

The effect of alcohol on the Indians of the high, dry plains, even when taken in small quantities, is to almost instantly drive them crazy. The frequent assaults that have been made by mounted Indians, armed with bows and arrows, on Western trading posts defended by American riflemen, sharply indicate the effect on men of highly nervous temperament, natives of a dry country where the light atmosphere is highly charged with electricity.

So it is with white men. The murderous acts of the "cow-boys," when under the influence of liquor, are well known. When sober, a more hospitable and kind-hearted class does not exist. When drunk they exhibit all the characteristics of the Indians. They are transformed into howling, blood-thirsty fiends. They shoot and stab each other as well as unoffending strangers, with the savageness of Cheyennes or Sioux. Most of these men are residents of Western Texas. Many of them were born in that State.

Almost all of them have lived on the plains for a number of years. The country they inhabit is arid and of an altitude of from 1,200 to 6,000 feet above the sea.—Vicksburg Herald.

ANCIENT MEDICAL TRAINING.

Prof. Huxley, in his closing address at the International Medical Congress, traced the origin of the healing art back to the Asklepiads of Greece, and the connection between anatomy and medicine to the Alexandrian School of Erasistratus and Herophilus. The London Academy thinks that the Hindoos have at least an equal claim to have founded an art of therapeutics upon the study of anatomy. In Hindoo history it is impossible to fix dates; but the best era of Indian medicine was contemporary with the ascendency of Buddhism. Beside attending to hygiene, regimen of the body and diet, the early Indian doctors undertook the most difficult operations with a confidence that could only be derived from anatomical study. It is known that students were trained to perform operations not only upon wax models and specimens from the vegetable kingdom, but also upon "the carcass of a dead bullock." It is said that the Greek surgeons under the Ptolemies were permitted to experiment upon living criminals.

THE POPULAR SCHOOLMISTRESS.

He thinks the town is wild over him. He keeps things at a white heat; is on the soft side of the newspaper men; is a royal good fellow in society; has a lovely wife; is strongly intrenched in the Popular Street Church, and stroke everybody the right way. The general impression is that the Goodrich School is a little ahead of anything else in the region, because he says so, and all his friends echo his opinion.—Journal of Education.

An Arkansas man paid $200 for a mad-stone, let a cur bite him as an experiment, and died in six weeks for a fact.

THE MAN WITH THE IRON MASK.

The identity of "The Iron Mask," or "The Man with the Iron Mask" has never been satisfactorily established. About the year 1679 he was carried with the utmost secrecy to the Castle of Pignarol, and wore during the journey a black mask, which was not of iron, but of black velvet, strengthened with whalebone, and secured behind with steel springs, or by means of a lock, as some say. The orders were that if he revealed himself he was to be killed. He was conveyed in 1686 to the isle of Saints Marguerite, and during the passage the strictest watch was kept that he might not allow himself to be discovered. The unknown prisoner was in 1698 conveyed to the Bastile, and was, as before, hidden behind the mask. In that prison the captive remained until his death, in 1730. On Nov. 20, the day after his death, he was buried in the cemetery of St. Paul, under the name of Machioli. The unknown was treated with the greatest respect, but so closely was he watched that he was not permitted to take off his mask even in the presence of the physician who attended him. Many conjectures have been hazarded as to who "The Man with the Iron Mask" could have been, the one generally accepted at the present day by those who have carefully investigated the subject being the following: It is conjectured that he was a Count Matthioli, a Minister of Charles III., Duke of Mantua. This Minister had been largely bribed by Louis XIV., and had pledged himself to urge the Duke to give up to the French the fortress of Casale, which gave access to the whole of Lombardy. Louis found that Matthioli was playing him false, and lured him to the French frontier, and then had him secretly arrested and imprisoned. As he was Minister Plenipotentiary at the time, his seizure was a flagrant violation of international law, which it was safer to be able to deny than to justify, and, when the denial was made once, the "honor" of France was involved in upholding it.

GARFIELD'S RELIGIOUS VIEWS.

By the natural bent of his mind, the late President had a liking for philosophic and religious studies, which was strengthened and gratified during his two terms at Williams College, where a good deal of attention is given to metaphysics, and his subsequent four years of teaching at Hiram; but in his later career the practical questions of life absorbed him so much that he found little time to devote to the domain of speculation and theoretical theory. He read Mill, Comte and Spencer, however, and was deeply interested in such books as James Freeman Clarke's "Ten Great Religions," and in the current discussions in the English reviews and magazines on new phases of religious belief and criticism. There was nothing of the bigot about him. He welcomed all honest discussion, and was always willing to throw off old opinions if convinced they were erroneous. In his religious views he might have been called a rationalistic Christian. I doubt if he could have passed a successful catechising on the doctrinal points of any orthodox creed, but on such essential matters as a belief in the divine guidance of the universe and the immortality of the human soul, his faith was unshaken. Modern materialism made no impression upon him. The argument that the mind is only a phenomenon of matter he thought a stupid reversal of the truth. The soul or life-principle was the real thing, he maintained, and the phases of matter only its transient and varying expression. The church to which he belonged from boyhood has no written creed and does not question its members as to their theological conceptions; therefore he was not hampered by formal statements of faith in his intellectual growth, and was able without hypocrisy to retain associations which became very dear to him in early life.—E. V. Smalley.

Abraham and Sarah.

The pretty story concerning Abraham and Sarah, as related by the Talmudists, runs as follows: When Abraham went to Egypt, he took with him a chest. At the Custom House the officers demanded duties. Abraham was ready to pay them, but desired that they would not open the chest. The officers at first asked for duties on clothes which the distinguished Hebrew consented to pay. By this they thought that the chest might contain gold. Abraham consented to pay the duties on gold. They then imagined the contents to be silk. In short, he consented to pay for pearls, or for any other valuable articles, if they would not open the chest. But the custom officers insisted upon opening it, and behold, as soon as the lid was lifted, that lustrous beauty, who made such a stir in Egypt, appeared. It was the superb Sarah, herself! The jealous Abraham, to hide her charms from the gaze of the envious Egyptians, had locked her up in this chest.

There is one consolation about growing old—you live to see your friends growing old, too.

A woman's wit is more frequently generated into the service of her folly than of her sense.

THE CHRONICLE.

BRIDGEPORT, MARCH 31, 1883.

SAN FRANCISCO AGENCY.—L. P. Fisher, 21 Merchants' Exchange, is our Agent, and is authorized to contract for advertising, receive subscriptions and make collections on our account.

THIS PAPER may be found on file at the Office of the Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where contracts for advertising can be made for it in NEW YORK.

The French have manufactured a gun calculated to work a complete revolution in artillery. It is made of half inch steel or even less, and placed upon an enormous turning lathe, above which are several bobbins wound with fine silk thread. The silk is attached to the cannon which, as it rapidly turns, soon covers itself with a thick and even thread. When the diameter is thus increased to the required size, a good thick coating of India rubber is applied to protect the silk from the weather, and the cannon is ready for use. It is claimed that a silk thread has as much tenacity and resistance as a steel thread of equal diameter, and much more elasticity, consequently its use for the manufacture of artillery possesses many evident advantages such as the great decrease in weight, and the increased facilities of handling and firing, due to the fact that silk is a non-conductor of heat.

THE N. Y. WORLD.—The leading Democratic journal of the country, the New York World, has for some time been published at a weekly loss of from $3,000 to $5,000. Hurlburt, the editor, asked for an opportunity to place it on a paying basis. It was granted, and a few days ago he commenced cutting right and left by discharging the musical and dramatic critic, 5 night editors, city editor and assistant, 16 reporters and 8 compositors—33 in all. This was followed by the closing of its Washington bureau.

On Saturday last, at St. Paul's Church, Cincinnati, while placing a screen over the celebrated painting, by Murillo, of "St. Paul in Chains," the sexton slipped from the scaffold and ruined the picture by plunging through it. It cost $25,000, and cannot be repaired. But it certainly can be replaced at the factories in Italy or Spain, where the "Old Masters" are turned out by the shipload for the American market.

An experiment in the cultivation of the grape at Colfax has resulted so favorably that there is a local excitement over the prospect of laying out large vineyards.—Land can be bought there at very low prices, most of the railroad land being held at only $2 50 per acre. About 1,200 acres adapted to grape culture have already been purchased.

Last week Dr. Baxter's long-distance speaking telephone was tested on a line of 750 miles from New York to Cleveland. Parties conversed with the same ease and distinctness as in the case of an ordinary local telephone. It is reported that the Western Union Telegraph Company is to purchase the patent.

San Francisco hoodlums having been in the habit of drinking the wine left on the graves for dead Chinamen, the Chinese last week poured the wine on the graves and left the empty bottles for the hoodlums.

Hellroaring Creek is within the boundaries of the National Park, and it tumbles rom rocky declivities into Yellowstone river above the Third Canon. The name hould be "revised," so that it shall be nown as Hades Creek.

Although the tariff, internal revenue and etter postage have been reduced, it is expected there will be $10,000,000 per month to spare for the reduction of the public debt, during the next fiscal year.

Oakland is to have an observatory, and A. Chabot, of East Oakland, has donated a telescope, which has been ordered from Alvan Clark, of Cambridgeport, Mass.

It is estimated that John L. Sullivan, the uglilist, has cleared $45,000, which shows hat fools we have in this country.

JOB PRINTING.—Job printing of the finest description will be furnished at this office at Sacramento prices.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

INSURED.—This week's storm has made the farmers of Mono county supremely happy and content, as it insures good crops in every section of our county. If there is a farmer in the county so neglectful of his interests as not to have subscribed to the CHRONICLE-UNION, now is the time to subscribe for the largest and "best and only reliable paper" published in Mono county, and through the valuable information they will weekly find in the columns of this well conducted family journal put themselves on the high road to prosperity. No farmer in this county is too poor to take his home paper, but if there are any laboring under such an impression, we will send it to them without price, if they will send address.

DISMISSED.—On Monday, in the Superior Court, Judge Briggs, on motion of District Attorney Goodall, dismissed the case of the People vs. John Powell, the District Attorney assuring the Court that, owing to the death of the prosecuting witness, and the conflicting nature of the testimony, a conviction was impossible. An order was made, discharging the defendant and relieving his bondsmen of further responsibility. Score one for the District Attorney, who has thus saved the county more than the amount of his annual salary.

SUPERIOR COURT.—Hon. R. M. Briggs, Superior Judge, returned home on Saturday last from Jackson with health much improved, and opened Court on Monday morning. Before proceeding to business Judge Briggs addressed the attorneys and said he hoped there would be no more interregnums in the business of the Court; that he should hold Court as long as his health would permit, and if again taken sick he will have another Judge preside temporarily.

A GOOD OLD AGE.—Jo. A. Anderson, the Janitor of the Court House, yesterday received a postal card from Baltimore announcing the continued good health of his uncle, George W. Murray, who is 107 years old and a class-leader in the African Methodist Church. If his nephew Joseph will but join the Church, perhaps he will be continued in the flesh as long as his uncle has been, and enable him to instil good into the heathens now roaming about our town.

ITS DEPTH.—The late storm deposited a "right smart" sprinkling of snow in this section. At Bridgeport we had eight inches of "the beautiful," and over twelve inches fell in Bodie. On the road, between here and Bodie, the snow is from one to six feet deep, having drifted greatly. On Thursday the mail did not arrive here until about four o'clock, Fairfield having had a hard trip. Yesterday's mail came in on time on horseback.

A GLORIOUS STORM.—On Monday afternoon a "longfelt want" was satisfied, after many days of threatening, by a welcome rain, which fell, alternately with snow, all that night and Tuesday, since which time it has been squally, excepting Wednesday night, when we had an old-fashioned snow fall of about eight inches in depth.

A BOMB.—President Arthur last week unwittingly exploded a bomb in the office of the Bodie Miner, and when Orlando returned from aloft he, Orlando, not Arthur, was minus shirt and balance. The howls from the Miner's office will strike terror into the White House. Waiter, a little more St. Jacob's oil!

A SOLID BOND.—The following is the bond of E. R. Cleveland, lately appointed Register of the United States Land Office at Bodie: G. B. Day, David Hays, N. B. Hunewill and James Sinnamon, for $2,500 each.

WATCH 'EM.—We earnestly hope that Coroner Warren will keep a good watch on Uncle Orlando and Henry Z. Whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad. Can it possibly be, that they are after Uncle O. and Henry Z.?

DRESSMAKING.—Mrs. J. C. McTarnahan, of Dogtown, is prepared to do fashionable dressmaking for those who may favor her with their patronage. We are informed that this lady is a fine seampstress and will give general satisfaction to her patrons.

REGISTER.—The President has appointed Edward R. Cleveland, of the Free Press, Register of the Bodie Land Office, vice James E. Goodall, resigned.

SCHOOL.—For a short vacation, school was closed this week. It will reopen on Monday.

DIVIDEND.—The Bulwer Con. Co. has declared a dividend of 5 cents per share, payable April 12th.

THE CALENDAR.—Judge Briggs will call the Calendar on Monday.

E. F. Gibson, at the Union Fruit and Vegetable Market, Bodie, receives daily by Express, fresh fruits and vegetables also fresh and salt water fish, poultry and game, which he sells cheap for cash. Orders promptly attended to.

A. B. Stewart, Druggist, Bodie, has drugs medicines, paints, oils, ammunition and cartridges. Also flower and garden seeds.

OVATION.—We clip the following from the San Jose Mercury of the 25th instant, relating to a well-deserved compliment to James Showers, ex-Sheriff of Mono county:

"The citizens of Los Gatos last evening tendered a grand ovation to James Showers, ex-Sheriff of Mono county; and Detective W. R. Gift, of Hollister; as an expression of the appreciation of the people of the part taken by these gentlemen in the capture of Joseph Jewell. Although the affair was an impromptu one the news quickly spread, and before 8 o'clock over five hundred people had assembled, ladies and gentlemen, and each one chock full of enthusiasm. The Los Gatos band marched through the town to Lyndon Hall, where the assemblage gathered. Very many were unable to obtain admission, but flocked around the doors and windows. A committee was appointed to escort the gentlemen to the hall, and when they arrived they were received with the greatest enthusiasm. In response to an overwhelming call, Messrs. Showers and Gift briefly recited the incidents of the chase, being frequently interrupted by rounds of spontaneous and hearty applause. After this, it was insisted by those present the acceptance of a goodly purse of money, as a still more substantial token of their appreciation. Messrs. Showers and Gift were then escorted to their lodgings, where they were serenaded by the band. Citizens of Los Gatos say that such an enthusiastic gathering was never witnessed in their town before."

The purses contained $100 each. At the time of arrest, Jewell was riding Shower's mare, of Mono fame.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.—The April number of this popular monthly is a very fine one, both in its literary matter and the splendor of its illustrations, of which there are fifty-one. The following is the table of contents: Washington Irving—Frontispiece; English Farmers, 10 ill.; The Treaty of Peace and Independence, 6 ill.; Whence and Whither? a poem; Artist Strolls in Holland, 15 ill.; "An English Nation," 10 ill.; A Home Lawn, 5 ill.; The Little White Beggars, a poem, illustrated; The Heir-Presumptive to the Imperial Crown of Mexico, with portrait; For the Major, a novel, Easter, a poem; A New Cinderella, a story; Shandon Bells, a novel, ill.; A Visit to Cetywayo; In the Belfry of the Nieuwe Kerk; Easy Chair, Literary Record; Historical Record; Drawer.

Published by Harper & Brothers, New York, at $4 per year.

NEW PAPER.—The Walker Lake Bulletin, published at Hawthorne by John M. Campbell, of the Dayton Times, has made its appearance. It starts out with a good advertising patronage, every business house in the place having an advertisement in its columns, which shows that the business men of Hawthorne are alive to their interests, and have set a good example to the business community of every town in the country that has a newpaper. It is a 24-column paper, is well up in its local department, and presents a neat appearance. Brother Campbell has our best wishes for the success of his new enterprise.

ATTACHED.—The Vulcan Powder Company, of San Francisco, last week attached the Stella (the old Morning Star) mine, at Mogul, and the Exchequer Mill, at Silver Mountain, Alpine county, to secure the payment of $9,000, due for powder furnished the Isabelle Company two years ago to run its large tunnel at Silver Mountain. The work at the mine, which is said to be a paying institution, is still continued for the benefit of the miners working therein. So sayeth the Markleeville Argus.

A simple ventilating contrivance is now attached to coffins in Germany when desired that produces a constant current of fresh air through the coffin as long as it is above ground, so that there is no danger of death by suffocation if any one has been accidentally buried while still alive, of which so many people have such apprehensive horror. An alarm is also connected with it.

A good cow has a full eye, a small and short head, dished in the head and sunken between the eyes, a soft and loose skin, deep from the loin to the udder, a very short tail, a thin udder, and a square bag with teats a good distance from each other, and one which when milked shrinks to a small compass.—Farmers' Magazine.

SAUERKRAUT.—If you want first-class sauerkraut go to David Hays & Bro.

Washing in Switzerland.

Magiore, or "Superior," is the last lake in the northwest of Italy. It is a lovely sheet of blue-green water enshrined among green-mountain sides. It must have been washing-day for the village when we arrived, as a whole row of peasant women were engaged in renovating their various family linens along the edge of the lakes. Her lakes are fed from the snow and ice which melt upon the mountains and run down in brooks and torrents. It is almost ice-cold in the elevated lakes, yet a row of women get down upon their knees around the water's edge, with their feet sticking out behind them, and slather the garments about for an hour or two and call it washing. Sometimes a wooden platform is erected out into the water a little way, and they kneel upon that. Occasionally they have, but as often do not have, a smooth wooden lapboard upon which they beat and rub their clothes. I judge there is not a washboard of the kind we know in America in all Switzerland. There is no hot water, and no steaming or scalding of the linen. Where the lake is wanting a wooden trough is fixed to catch water from a mountain stream, and the village women take their clothing there and have a picnic of wash and gossip. From the looks of the garments after they are hung out to dry, there is more gossip than wash.

Everything is done by sheer brute force in Switzerland as elsewhere among the peasantry of Europe. Hour after hour these women kneel with their arms in the deathly cold water above their elbows, and slash and pound the clothes and rub them together, and dance them up and down in the current. Soap is used in a painfully economical manner.

From an artistic point of view, if we leave out the women's frowsy heads and dusty, bare feet, this way of renovating soiled garments may be highly picturesque. Indeed, in my native land, I have seen paintings of these washer-women that in the abstract were greatly admired. But from a practical point of view, I must say the whole proceeding is extremely ridiculous, and the washes do look like distress.—Letter from Switzerland.

A Button in the Hat.

"My dere frens," said a colored preacher in a small town in Georgia, "we tanks you dis ebenin' for $5.75 and one button. De man who put de button in de hat sent it away in a good cause, but he loses an old fren, fur it am a greasy button. Now I'se not a rich man, fur I'se a poor man, but I kin jist give dat man $1 who'll cum up an' git his button. (A pause, with silence all over, and no one went up to get the button.) I dur you to cum up an' git de button. None of you's a commin'? Well, I'se afeared you nebber see your ole fren no more. It's a west button. My west's all full uv buttons, an no reguler place fur it. But I tells you what I does. I'll take dat button home an' have my wife sew it on somwhar whar you kin all see it. Den when you comes to church you always sees your ole fren again. But now I tells you de man as put dat button in de hat, he no gentlemen. He better git converted right away. He thort he got rid uv dat button but he nebber more mistaken in his life. Dat button bound to follow him all through dis world, and when he git down to de bank uv Jordan, de button sure to be right smart after him, an' when he git 'cross de ribber on de udder side, look out, fur de button be dar before him."

The Oldest Stove.

There has sprung up a rivalry in the oldest stove line. First it was stated that "the oldest stove probably in the United States is the one that warms the halls of the Virginia capitol in Richmond. It was made in England and sent to Richmond, in 1770, and warmed the house of Burgesses for 60 years before it was removed to its present location, where it has remained for 30 years." Next comes a correspondent who recalls that, "at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, a stove was exhibited in the Pennsylvania Educational building, cast at Cornwall furnace, Lebanon county, in 1713, 67 years before the one in Virginia. And in 1845 there was one, cast about the same date (and I believe in the Cornwall furnace also), in a school-house near Funkstown, Md., in regular use, as I was informed by those who saw it with me at the time—that is, in 1845.

A CHICAGO girl died of lockjaw superinduced by wearing shoes two sizes too small for her. Her feet were not fashionably small, and she endeavored to compress them. What agony the poor thing must have suffered! Well might she have sung with Goldsmith—

> And e'en while fashion's brightest arts decoy,
> The heart, distrusting, asks if this be joy.

How curious, to be sure! Turning from an able temperance editorial in the Weekly Illuminator, our eyes fall upon a complimentary notice of Ginsling & Stoughton's liquors, with the injunction, "Try them; you will find them delicious." How beautifully diversified are the opinions of editorial people.

AN Eastern reporter for an agricultural paper in giving the features of a country fair where horse racing was the special attraction says: "The fair consisted of a few big pumpkins, some venerable bedquilts strung on a line, and bully horse trots."

DANIEL DREW, the great Wall street speculator, was in his early life a cattle drover, at the princely salary of 75 cents per day, and drove himself into a position where he "rounded up" an income of not less than $25,000,000 per annum.

AN Irish gentleman having a small picture-room, several persons desired to see it at the same time. "Faith, gintlemen," said he, "if you all go in, it will not hold you."

Be deaf to the quarrelsome, blind to the scorner, and dumb to those who are mischievously inquisitive.

Ex-Gov. Hubbard's Daughter and Her Husband.

Newspaper readers will readily recall the sensation created two years ago by the elopement and marriage of a daughter of ex-Gov. Hubbard, of Connecticut, with a coachman named Shepard. It has, since that time, been reported that the couple were living in pinching poverty, but this statement is not true. Soon after the marriage they went to board with Shepard's brother in Hartford. Mrs. Shepard occasionally visited her father's house to see her mother and sisters, but the presence of her husband in the home of her father was strictly forbidden. Shepard has a wealthy uncle living in Middleton, Ct., who became interested in Shepard after the elopement. The uncle was somewhat nettled by insinuations that Shepard was not good enough for the young lady, and to show that the sympathy was practical made tender of pecuniary assistance. He made deposit of the necessary amount of money, and Shepard was enabled to purchase an interest in a well-established livery business in New Haven. Not only is the former coachman doing well in business, but he is conducting himself in a manly manner in other ways, and his wife is reported to be very happy. She is seen frequently driving in her phaeton, and, it is understood, is kindly received by many of her old friends in New Haven. Once in a while she goes to Hartford, and is noticed as being in perfect health and looking prettier than ever. She keeps up a thoroughly stylish appearance, and has money enough from her husband to warrant it, all of which proves that she is not "living in poverty," as thousands of people all over the country, who have become interested in her welfare, will be happy to learn.

THERE are at present in the Old World and in the New World more than 100,000 railway locomotives. Their total force is equal to 30,000,000 horse-power, and all the other steam engines on the globe are estimated at 46,000,000 horse-power. The technical "horse-power," however, is really equal to three average horses, and each horse to about seven men, the aggregate power, therefore, of all the engines being vastly more than the effective force of all the human workers living. Four-fifths of the steam engines now at work have been made within a quarter of a century or so.

OUR JUVENILES.

Two Fine Bears.

Two little cub bears,
Frisky and strong—
Hair brown and shaggy,
Claws sharp and long.

Two little cub bears
In a child's breast;
Fawn-like and gentle,
Bringing us rest.

In the green grass rolling,
Snapping their jaws;
Now standing upright,
Licking their paws.

Why, how can that be?
Not strange you deem;
Where was there ever
A gentle bear?

Two little cub bears
In a child's breast,
Called bear and for-bear,
They bring us rest.

Hints on Good Manners.

I beg your pardon for giving you a hint about two or three common usages which you know of but sometimes forget. Lewis was passing hurriedly through the dining-room, when his Aunt Carrie spoke to him. He did not hear precisely what she said, so he stood in the doorway and said, "What, ma'am?" "I beg pardon" would have been more elegant there. But when he entered mamma's chamber, where she and sister Sue were having a confidential chat, if he wished to interrupt the talk for a moment, the right thing to say would have been, not, "I beg pardon," but "Please excuse me."

Bessie came down to breakfast one morning, lately, and at once seated herself, and began to drum on the table with her spoon. Nothing could have been ruder, and I was surprised, for I had thought Bessie a well-bred child. She ought to have waited until the the family had assembled, and then she should not have taken her place until mamma was rea-ly to sit down.

But when Clara was visiting the Stanleys she really tried to be very polite, and she made one mistake—one, indeed, which people often make. Mrs. Stanley helped her bountifully to pudding, and she passed it along to her next neighbor. She ought to have retained it herself, as it was meant for and apportioned to her.

Rob Hart has two or three friends staying a few days at his home, and his sister Agnes finds it a great trial to eat with them, and why? Would you believe that Will Fleming appears at the dinner table without his coat, that Arthur Samson eats with his knife, and that Phil Decker gobbles his soup in the greatest haste, and almost swallows the spoon, instead of taking the soup, as polite people do, from the side of the spoon? These boys are honest and faithful at school, but they have not been taught good manners.—Exchange.

A Talk with a Circus Wonder.

A circus company has entered a train, ready to go to the next large town. Ike and Dolly, a 10-year-old boy and his little sister, run up and mount the cars hoping to catch a sight of the wonderful performers; eagerly watching them, the children forget themselves, the train starts and they are carried off.

The conductor led Ike and Dolly into the passenger-car where the members of the troupe were, and—oh, joy!—the Knife-Swallower made room for Ike to sit down beside him. He looked astonishly like an ordinary man—a big, burly fellow, with a good-natured face, weather-beaten like a sailor's. Ike was amazed to see that knife and snake-swallowing had not affected his appearance, any more than education had affected the pig's. Zach, his chum, had confided to Ike that the man was made of gutta-percha inside; that was why the knives and snakes didn't hurt him; and Ike was devoured by curiosity to know whether this was really so, but he was afraid it would not be polite to ask.

The Fat Woman, who could not sit on an ordinary seat, but had one which was constructed expressly for her, motioned to Dolly to come and sit on her footstool. Dolly felt a little shy of this mountain of flesh, with features that were scarcely distinguishable, and a gruff voice that reminded her of the big bear's in the story of "Golden-hair." But, as the car was full, and there was no other seat for her, she obeyed.

"Have you lost your ma, dear?" said the gruff voice, in a very kindly tone.

"We've lost Barbara, and she'll be so worried, and the pea-porridge is getting cold, and—oh, dear!" and poor Dolly broke down, utterly overcome by her misfortunes.

"La! is the lopsy-popsy going to cry? Don't—there's a deary. You'll get back to Barbara all safe, and just think what a privilege it is to travel with such a show as this—Moral and Intellectual, National and Transatlantic!—though they ain't genooyne, child; don't you believe a word of it! Not one of 'em's but me an' the Mites. Me an' the Mites is genooyne!"

"Genooyne" was too large a word for Dolly's comprehension; but, by the Fat Woman's mysterious air and tone, she knew that she was telling her something very important.

"No bigger than common folks, the Giant ain't, before he's built up and stuffed out," the Fat Woman went on, in a very low tone, and with a careful glance around, to see that she could not be overheard.

"Do you mean that he isn't a truly giant?" asked Dolly, with a crushing sense of bewilderment and disappointment.

"No more than you are. And as for the Bearded Woman, she takes it off and puts it in her pocket when nobody's 'round. The Two-headed Girl, the greatest scientific wonder of the age, they call her on the bills—why she's two girls. They're dreadful slim, and they manage to stick 'em into one dress. The Talking Giraffe—why, it's a man behind the scenes that talks; ventriloquism, you know? The man that swallows knives and snakes—that trick is very well done, and folks is easy to take in, and he is so quick that you can't see where the knives go to, if you're watching ever so close. Swallow 'em, child! Of course he don't. He couldn't swallow 'em, no more'n you could."

"Oh, dear! I hope you won't tell Ike. He would be so disappointed," said Dolly, feeling keenly the hollowness of the world.

"But me and the Mites is genooyne! There ain't a grain of humbug about me, and the little teenty-tonty dears is just as the Lord made 'em!"

A Story of a Quarrel.

"I shan't!" shrieked Lou.

"I shall!" shrieked Jule.

"Then I won't play," said Lou, with an angry pout, "and you are the meanest girl that ever lived, so there!"

A window slid softly up somewhere behind the honeysuckles.

"Children," called grandmamma, "come here a moment."

They obeyed, shamefacedly enough. Grandmamma, dear, gentle grandmamma, had only since Uncle Charlie's death come to live at the farm, and the girls, though they had learned to love her very dearly, stood a little in awe of her.

But they went straight in and stepped one to either side of her high-backed chair.

"Well," said grandmamma, kindly.

"I want to play keep store," volunteered Jule.

"And I wanted to play house," said Lou.

Grandma smiled, and closed a wrinkled hand over the small brown one on each chair arm.

"And so you quarreled," she said. "Would you like a little story?"

"Oh, yes'm!" cried Lou and Jule exactly together, and then they hooked their little fingers above grandma'ma's head and wished. What makes girls always do that, I wonder? Boys never do.

"A long time ago," began grandmamma, "there lived in far-away England two maiden sisters. They were all alone in the world and very wealthy; as time went on, and they grew gray and wrinkled with years, they began to think of death and of what they would do with their money.

"At length they decided to build a church of solid stone, which might endure for centuries and tell the name and fame of the Orme sisters to future generations. The stone was quarried and the builders came. Then whether tower or spire should adorn their church, the sisters could not agree.

"They wrangled and argued for days and months—neither would yield, and in the end each had her way. The tower and spire were erected side by side.

"There they stand through storm and shine as they have stood for ages; the square, strong tower and the slender, tapering spire—a quarrel fixed in stone. And the story of these two stubborn sisters is told to strangers who visit the place over and over again."

Grandmamma paused. Lou and Jule looked across into each other's eyes and laughed.

"Weren't they funny?" said Lou. "We'll play store if you'd rather, Jule."

"And then we'll play house," said Jule.

So the sun shone again. But they lost the wish; for, you know, if one speaks before one is asked the question, the charm is broken.

Sensible Jews.

Probably women have been better treated on the whole by the Jews than by any other people. Polygamy, it is true, was permitted in the early ages, and was not considered a violation of religious law in the patriarchal days, and even as lately as the year 1030 after Christ, at a synod held at Worms, we have evidence that it was usual, as Rabbi Gierson found it necessary formally to prohibit the practice. In spite of this, the condition of Jewish women was superior to that of any pagan or Mohammedan nation. They were never treated as wholly inferior, they were never shut up in prison-like edifices, nor compelled to cover their faces in the presence of men as being their superiors; we read of them as walking about the streets, fields and lanes, without any reproach, and of their readily conversing with strangers. They were always present at public ceremonials, rejoicings and festivities, and from the days of Miriam downward encouraged the people by their songs of exultation, and, as we remember, enlivened the long march of the Israelites by their dancing and singing. The Hebrew wife was the companion and often guide of her husband, rather than his toy, and Jewish women were admitted to the highest posts of honor and dignity—were even made Judges in the land.

A grizzly bear, recently killed on Wood River, Idaho, weighed 1,400 pounds, and had claws measuring seven inches in length. The skin was simply immense, and was shipped to San Francisco.

Good qualities stand more in the way of one's making friends than vices do.
